6. Dedicated Office of Information Technology (OIT) employees managed to maintain OIT data processing and communications services throughout our recent bouts with winter weather. During the storm on 22 January, one team of operators remained on duty for 24 hours. During the second storm on 25-26 January, another team stayed on duty for a 36-hour period.

7. OIT is exploring ways to provide information processing technology support for handicapped employees of CIA. Initial discussions with NSA, the State Department, the Interagency Committee for Computer Support of Handicapped Employees, and private sector firms have surfaced several systems with potential for the CIA environment.

8. The Department of State has informed the Office of Logistics (OL) that as a result of "inequalities" between the US Government treatment of Cuban interests in the Washington, D.C. area and the Government of Cuba (GOC) treatment of US interests in the city of Havana, the GOC will allow no more US Government charter flights into Havana. This includes flights carrying officials, diplomats, pouch materials or cargo. Staff and all materiel must arrive on normal commercial flights and be "submitted to normal immigration, customs and health procedures."

9. OL and Allied personnel have received numerous well deserved kudos for their outstanding support to Agency personnel during the two snowstorms this past week. Fourteen Allied personnel worked a total of 602 hours clearing the first storm, and 16 personnel worked 586 hours clearing the second storm. They voluntarily assisted many grateful employees in digging out their cars in the process. OL personnel also provided substantial assistance to employees, including issuing 471 cots, 538 pillows, 631 blankets, 233 meals and overnight shelter for those visitors stranded in the Main Reception area.
